

REMARKS

The claims have been amended to make it clearer that merely streaming video is not covered by the claims. Instead, it is now clearer that distinct portions of the complete image may be viewed by the user. The extent of these portions is dependent upon the amount of viewing time. With streaming video, the portions are not viewable until the entire image arises and, if one were to look at the video stream before the image actually appears, the portions that were viewed could not be said to depend upon how much of the video content was viewed.

Therefore, the claims now distinguish the cited reference and reconsideration is respectfully requested.

Respectfully submitted,

Date: February 24, 2005
